The Honorable William Barr
Attorney General
United States Department of Justice
950 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20530-0001

Dear Attorney General Barr:

On July 16, 2016, presidential candidate Donald J. Trump signed the Children’s Internet Safety Presidential Pledge, committing his administration to “aggressively enforce” existing laws to prevent the exploitation of children online. Federal obscenity laws were explicitly listed as a key component of the pledge. As you well know, obscenity, often referred to as hardcore pornography, is illegal: 18 U.S.C. Chapter 71 § 1460-1470, prohibits distribution of hardcore pornography on the Internet, on cable/satellite TV, on hotel/motel TV, in retail shops, and by common carrier.

In light of President Trump’s pledge and the indisputable status of obscenity as a violation of federal law, the undersigned organizations are perplexed that under the Trump Administration, not one adult obscenity prosecution has been undertaken, much as none were initiated by the Obama Administration.

As a result of the federal government’s apparent indifference, online pornography has only gotten more brutal. Regarding the gruesome perversity of online obscenity, here is just one example of thousands we could offer: During the week of January 4, Pornhub’s most watched video, with over four million views worldwide, showed a teenage girl being electrocuted, burned with wax, and penetrated by a machine, while her hands and feet were shackled and her mouth was gagged. She screamed in pain, throughout this torture.

Meanwhile, criminals exploiting human dignity have gotten more audacious. Last December, The Erotic Review, a notorious online forum where high-frequency buyers of prostitution and sex trafficking rate the people they bought, was back to business as usual. It shuttered its U.S. operations soon after passage of FOSTA-SESTA and the seizure by federal agents of Backpage.com.

Our concern is not academic.

Mounting medical evidence finds extensive neurological and physical harm is caused by exposure to the lewd graphic obscenity openly available to anyone who can type a few words in a search bar—or scroll and click through Twitter, Instagram, Snapchat, or TikTok. Enclosed is an 85-page research summary: “The Public Health Harms of Pornography: How Pornography Fuels Child Sexual Abuse, Compulsive Sexual Behavior, Violence against Women, Commercial Sexual Exploitation, and More.” Most adversely impacted are developing minds: increased pornography use is linked to decreased grey matter and reduced functional connectivity in the brain.

Further, 45 peer-reviewed studies demonstrate strong evidence that pornography leads to compulsive sexual behavior, which means, the more you view the more you want to see, despite negative consequences. The prevalence of pornography consumption has contributed to documented harms such as skyrocketing rates of Erectile Dysfunction among males aged 18-40 years. Disturbingly, a meta-analysis of 46 studies reported that the effects of exposure to pornographic material are “clear and consistent:” pornography use puts people at increased risk for committing sexual offenses. Further support for an association between pornography use and sexual offending is found in a national longitudinal study of sexual offenses (e.g., sexual harassment, sexual assault, coercive sex, and rape) among youth aged 10–21 years. The study found that the average age of first perpetration was between 15 and 16 years old, and importantly, after controlling for potentially influential characteristics, current exposure to violent pornography has a powerfully addictive effect.

was strongly associated with the emergence of sexual violence perpetration. Content analysis studies demonstrate pornography teaches users that women enjoy sexual violence and degradation.\(^1\)

Torture, incest, group sex, bestiality, choking, and excretion are among the acts common in obscenity today. Hardcore pornography is combined with explicitly racist and misogynic themes as well as a near-infinite variety of teen rape story lines. This toxic brew is poisoning the minds of users, young and old, but it is having a particularly insidious impact on young viewers, who have no real-world references—or an experience of authentic intimacy—to frame the violence and perversity they often stumble on, inadvertently.

We write to request a meeting with you to discuss the many dimensions of this problem, and our multiple reasons for seeking federal intervention to limit obscenity. Among us are attorneys who have prosecuted obscenity cases in the past; we are not naïve about the legal requirements and hurdles in place to successfully prosecute this filth. However, we believe the gravity of this issue and harm it is inflicting on society make it well worth the effort.
